Unit 2 • The world of teens Level A

ARead the text carefully.

Every spring, students at Brookfield School organise a clothes swap. The idea started when fifteen-year-old

Isla noticed that many of her friends bought new clothes and rarely wore them. This year, more than eighty students brought clean jackets, trousers and T-shirts to the school hall. Volunteers checked each item and arranged the clothes by size. Students could choose three pieces without paying anything. The school also set up a repair corner where an art teacher helped teenagers fix loose buttons and small holes. Some students initially thought second-hand clothes were unfashionable. By the end of the day, they had changed their minds. Isla hopes the event will encourage everyone to buy less and reuse more.
